During consideration of both the army and navy bills I did all in my The republican party opposed this power to have these measures provide been overcharged for its munitions The democratic party stands for the and the wisdom of complete government manufacture of articles used by The republican party stands for the the army was set out in great detail in the proceedings of the house of representatives on February 27, 1914 when the army bill was under consideration.

On April 18, when the naval bill was up, I introduced an amendment providing for an extension of the plant of the Bureau of Ordnanee of the navy The efforts of the money interests department, so that the government to the government. Such was the replain that there might have been a of the country to hold down the lid till might manufacture armor plate. A real fight, even if the other nations after election must now be involving point of order was raised, however and of 1900 of the provision that I pre- cross and the Grand cross of the Milithe amendment was stricken out.

On May 7, while thesame bill was engaged. Before the war broke out under consideration I offered a second herein provided for, provided such contracts can be made at a price which, in his judgment, is reasonable and equitable; but in case he is unable to make contracts for armor under the above conditions, he is hereby authorized and directed to procure a site for and to erect thereon a factory for the manufacture of armor and gun forgings; and the sum of $4,000,000 is hereby ap propriated toward the erection of said factory and the purchase of a site

This amendment is practically a duplicate of the provision contained in the naval appropriation bill of 1900; and the mere fact that the bill carried this provision resulted in the government saving millions of dollars in the cost of armor plate. The secretary of the navy was able to say to the three firms having a monopoly of the manufacture of armor in this country that if they were not willing to sell armor to the government at a fair and reasonable price he was authorized by law to go ahead and manufacture his own armor. Let us see whether the insertion of the amendment I have just offered proved of value in the naval bill of 1900.

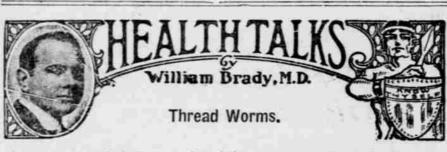

Back in 1893 the government was paying an average of $658 a ton for armor. Some time later Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, started in to fight the high price and to oppose the armor ring, and he forced the armor trust gradually to reduce its price until, in 1900, he got the price down to $413 a ton.

Then the naval appropriation bill of 1900 was amended to carry the provision I have just alluded to, which provided that if the secretary of the navy was unable to obtain a square deal from the armor trust, he was authorized and directed to build a government armor plant.

What was the result? The three concerns manufacturing armor, rather than have Uncle Sam build a plant gradually reduced their prices from $413 in 1900 to $354 in 1906, which meant a saving of millions of dollars sult of the insertion in the naval bill sented. Without spending a dollar for tary Order of St. Heinrich, Emperor a plant or doing anything further than William in return has bestowed on simply providing that the secretary of the king the Order of the Iron Cross." plan if he could not obtain fair treatment from the trust, the government saved millions. But when congress failed to continue the provision in the naval bill it gradually lost its moral effect upon the sure enough 14-year-old whisky-drawn armor ring, and the price of armor plate to the government was steadily advanced from $345 a ton in 1906 to $454 a ton at the present time. A Three Cornered Swindle-By M. Quad. Copyrighted, 1914, by Associated Literary Eureau

It wasn't what a conservative old new offer?" lawyer would call a straight case. I had been sent to London to look up a sharper and make him disgorge for the benefit of the heirs of another sharper. The widow of one John Saunders, an Englishman, who had died in Buffalo several years previously, had put her claim in the hands of a New York law yer. This Saunders had been mixed up in a big swindle before leaving England. The name of the living partner was Smallwood, and it was understood that he had set up as a money lender. The papers criminated Smallwood in a sense, but in case he was defiant we could not push the case against him.

After some little trouble I found

Smallwood and his den. He was a burly, big man, with a loud voice and a domineering way. In assisting to perpetrate that swindle he had a narrow escape, and he realized that in a way he was still under the surveillance of the police, but I put him down as a man not to be easily frightened. I found I was right in this. When I had BEEN on Second avenue in the busstated my errand he laughed in my face and called me a fool. The one interview satisfied me that my mission was a fallure, and I bade Mr. Smallwood good day with as much courtesy as I could assume. It was about luncheon time when I left his office, and I dropped into a modest restaurant for a light meal. I had scarcely got seated when a stranger, who had a seedy-genteel look about him, asked permission BEING king, cotton ought not ex- to take the opposite side of the table, perience any difficulty in raising a saying he had some information to give me. > I did not give my case away in replying, but gave him to understand that the money lender had refused to do the square thing by me.

"He's a cur, a cheat, a swindler and all that's mean and contemptible," continued the stranger with a good deal of feeling. "He has cheated and wronged me, and I can get no satisfaction. Today, however, I learned of an incident in his past life that will give me a good hold on him. I must go to Liverpool to complete my information. If you will go along and become responsible for expenses I wu share the information with you."

That was a matter to be talked one at another meeting.

When I made my third call on Small wood I was cordially received, and while waiting for supper to be servel we came to an understanding. He was to give me $10,000 for Saur widow, and I was to give him a receip in full. He grew sociable and job as the affair was concluded, and my glass was no sooner empty than h pressed me to drink again. Of a sal den things began to whirl, and ther came a blank. When I recovered con sciousness it was morning and I was lying on a cot bed in a strange room. Where am I?" I asked of a man who was in the room. "In Dr. Coldwell's private lunate asylum," he replied. "Who brought me here?"

"Your friends. The loss of your money in that Peruvian speculation unbalanced your mind. You will be well cared for here, and if you aid me as you should your detention will not last over three months."

"I see how it is," I said as I looked him straight in the eye. "I am indebted to Smallwood for this. He drugged me and had me brought here that he might have time to fix up his effairs."

I was given plenty of reading matter, and the doctor played chess with me, and, taken altogether, the time did not pass unpleasantly. In the three weeks I was in the house I saw only the doctor and an old woman. At 9 o'clock one evening I was told that the cure was complete and ten minutes later was being driven away from the building in a closed carriage. After an hour's ride I was set down in a street in Whitechapel, and had I been backed by all the police of London I could not have found the house where I had been held captive. Smallwood had been gone a week-gone no one knew where. While I do not believe there was anything in the Liverpool story told me by Duff, the money lender was more afraid of me than he need have been and had played me a pretty little trick to give himself time to set tle up his affairs and move on.
